6. Brief summary of the event

Prof. Raj Kumar spoke about the contribution of Mulk Raj Anand to English Literature. The lecture was designed to make the students familiar with Mulk Raj Anand. He was among the beginners who initiated the representation of marginalized subjects in Indian literature in the early twentieth century. His novel Untouchable speaks volume of caste discrimination practiced in Indian social order. Prof Kumar summarised the period between 1930s and 2024 in context of caste discourse. Prof. Kesava Kumar talked about Ngugi's contribution to Postcolonial Studies. He exposed how the dominant discourse controls the psyche of the marginalized subjects. Prof. Akshaya Kumar began with the idea of ideology and explained how it works in everyday social. How ideology functions as a "material practice" rather than merely a set of ideas. He explained the repressive and ideological state apparatuses. Prof. Pramod Mehra enlightened the students about the concept of world literatures and how the Eurocentric approach was promoted through literature. He discussed how the Eurocentric approach can be contested by reading the local literature. Dr. Dhurjatti Sarma spoke about the nuances of translation. Translation across media, namely literature and cinema has opened up the world of art and creativity to a wider audience. The fusion of both these media has given rise to countless fascinating exploration of narratives. A number of our favourite movies have been adapted from or influenced by books, forming an intrinsic connection between the world of literature and cinema.

Introduction to World Literature

1. World literature transcends geographical and temporal boundaries, encompassing diverse literary works from across the globe.
2. Theoretical frameworks such as World-Systems Theory, Postcolonial Theory, Cosmopolitanism, and Transnationalism offer insights into the dynamics of literary production, circulation, and reception on a global scale.
3. These theories emphasize decolonization, cultural diversity, and dialogue across boundaries, challenging hegemonic narratives and amplifying marginalized voices.
4. Through the lens of these theories, we aim to understand and appreciate the rich tapestry of world literature, embracing its plurality and complexity.
