INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Today nation-states have become far too interdependent; and relations among them whether political or those related to trade and commerce, have developed into an essential area of knowledge. In this unit, we are mainly concerned with the political relations among sovereign societies called nations, or nation-states.

Political events are important, but even economic developments, trade, commerce and activities of actors like multinational corporations are no less significant.

DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE

The Department of Political Science at Ram Lal Anand College is engaging its students in getting first-hand experience through debates, dialogues, symposiums, national level seminars and through research.

The teaching and research programme of the Department is based on a comprehensive social science approach that integrates and interrogates sociological, political, economic, philosophical and cultural dimensions. It encourages a comprehensive study and research in the field of governance and recent political debates, keeping especially the Indian and the international developments in focus.

INDIA'S FOREIGN POLICY

In its seventh decade since independence, India today stands at a crossroads in its relations with the rest of the world. Being one of the most powerful economies in the world today gives India clout on the global stage matched only by a few other states.

Coupled with highly professional armed forces well-ensconced in a liberal democratic polity, India is emerging as an entity that can decisively shift the global balance of power. Indian foreign and security policy is currently grappling with a range of issues that are controversial but central to the future of Indian global strategy.
