ABOUT THE SEMINAR

The 21st century marks a decisive transition in global politics. The post-Cold War assumptions of liberal order, institutional multilateralism, and democratic expansion are increasingly being contested. Global governance institutions confront legitimacy deficits in an emerging multipolar world order. In this rapidly transforming global landscape, statecraft must be reimagined. This International Seminar seeks to bring together scholars, researchers, policymakers, and practitioners to critically examine evolving forms of sovereignty, democratic governance, and global institutional restructuring in the 21st century.
